Everybody admits that the New York election will have an important bearing on the campaign of 1912. Roosevelt antagonized Sherman, beat him for chairman of the State convention, forced the nomination of his man Stimpson and is stumping the State for his chosen ticket. A defeat for Stimson is a defeat for Roosevelt in his own State. This is just what will happen and all political prophets are predicting a landslide for Dix and the Democratic ticket. Not only the Democrats but the standpat Republicans are going to take a shot at the African lion hunter.

Sarah Bernhardt, youthful and bouyant, is back in this country at 67 years of age, to make another farewell tour. Upon leaving the ship Saturday she was kissed by nearly everybody on board and ran a gauntlet of osculation on the pier. She is easily the greatest of living actresses. This is her eighth visit to America.

Miles McLeod, a new heavyweight pugilist, called "the white man's bope" is in training by Joe Choynsti, at Albany, Mo., to lick Jack Johnson. He is a farmer "boy" 28 years old, weighs 225 pounds, is 78 inches tall, 41 around the chest, 39 around the waist, biceps 16, forearm 13, thigh 23, calf 16 and other measurements in proportion.

Mrs. Cornelia Baxter-Tewis, the divorced wife of A. H. McKee, is a social leader in Paris, France, and many suitors are attracted by her beauty and wealth. She is a daughter of Col. Baxter of Tennessee, and her first husband, a Californian, left her very wealthy.

Indiana Democrats are expecting to sweep the State next week by a big majority. They are claiming 40 majority in the Legislature, assuring the election of John W. Kern to the Senate over Beveridge.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflammation of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is naturally closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out of this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

A decline of ten cents in wheat since harvest time has been a severe blow to mills that bought heavily at the high prices. Wheat in Chicago is now down to about 90 cents and flour is getting cheaper.

Rev. E. O. Hanks, a Danville minister, made a dying request that he be buried standing, and his coffin was lowered into a post hole grave. He said he wanted to be found standing erect on judgment day.

Judge Holt, of the federal court at New York, declined to sit at the banquet table with Mr. Roosevelt. Teddy probably knows now how Senator Lorimer felt.

BERRY STATES HIS POSITION

Declares Henry Lawrence Recognized Chairman as Calloway's Chairman.

Paducah, Ky., Oct. 28.—Judge W. A. Berry, of this city, Democratic State central committeeman, from the First District, explained his position in the Third senatorial District controversy, in which he sustains Chairman Newt Chrisman, of Calloway county. He says:

"Yes, I understand I have been criticised for taking any part in the political muddle in the Third senatorial District, but the criticism has only come from the friends of Mr. Lawrence and his political ally, John H. Keys, of Calloway county. I attach no importance to the effort up on the part of Mr. Lawrence and Mr. Keys to foist the latter upon the district as its chairman, nor do I consider it done in good faith, when Mr. Lawrence, as executive committeeman of the First congressional District, has already heretofore recognized N. W. Chrisman, of Calloway county, as the chairman of the Democratic committee of that county, twice in the nomination of Judge T. J. Nunn for Judge of the Court of Appeals and twice in the nomination of the Hon. O. M. James, for congress, the first time in each instance in calling the respective committeemen together to devise ways and means of nominating the candidates for the respective offices, and the second time in each instance in calling the respective committeemen together to declare them the nominees for the respective offices. Mr. Lawrence can therefore recognize Mr. Keys in only one way, and that way is as a bolter."

SMALLPOX AND THE FEVER

Former Scourge Cost More Lives Than Yellow Plague During the Year of 1905.

The yellow fever epidemic at New Orleans cost 455 lives, according to the statistics of public health and marine hospital service, which had charge of the quarantine and sanitary work after the national government had been appealed to for aid.

Similar statistics show that during the last fiscal year smallpox cost more lives than this. The death toll was 494 in the 38 states in which the plague appeared.

The year was a fortunate one with regard to smallpox, and the number of deaths was much lower than it often is. Nevertheless, the statistics show that it needs much more attention than it is getting.

An English medical journal remarked not long ago that if intelligent sanitary work such as the United States has accomplished on the Isthmus of Panama could be brought to bear in Great Britain the smallpox of that country would disappear entirely in a very short time.

The United States certainly possesses men with brains to suppress the disease in this country.

The supreme court of the United States has recently upheld the validity of compulsory vaccination laws. There is no obstacle to prevent an effective sanitary crusade. Our state boards of health ought to get together, call in the aid of government sanitarians, if need be, and do the work completely, once and for all.

MANAGING HIM

The young man with the stern expression said "Good-evening" very formally—to the evident surprise of the pretty girl with the big eyes and the infantile expression.

"I want to explain at the start," he began, "that I'm not jealous. I know that when a man objects to anything, a girl always thinks it is because he is jealous. But I wouldn't be guilty of such foolishness. Expressing one's opinion is a far different—"

"Dear me!" broke in the pretty girl, anxiously, "you aren't going to be cross—and with me—are you, Oscar?"

"That's another thing I hope I don't do," said the young man, shaking his head. "That is, lose my temper. I trust I can say that I don't like a thing or don't approve of it without getting worked up—"

The pretty girl leaned forward. "You don't mean," she said, "that I have done something you are objecting to?"

"Some men," went on the stern young man, "would get into a tearing rage with you for acting as you did last evening, but I am different. One of my dances you sat out with that Graham man. I hunted all over for you and saw you as you came out of the conservatory. Apart from the fact that it was my dance I don't like to have you with Graham. He is a conceited cad and I am sure dyes his hair. He must be twice your age, though he doesn't look it."

"And I certainly expected to take you in to supper. After searching for you everywhere I found you, apparently enjoying yourself, oblivious of all else, with Tom Reynolds. You may not have taken that table behind the palms to keep out of sight, but it looked as if you had. And in neither case did you have the grace to apologize or even act upset. You seemed to think it wasn't anything to throw me over without so much as a word because you wanted to flirt with someone else."

"Understand, I'm not jealous of Reynolds and Graham. It's the principle of the thing that I'm objecting to. What there is in Reynolds to attract any one I can't for the life of me see. My feelings aren't hurt, either, but I thought possibly—well, I thought you might have something to say to me if I came around this evening. Otherwise I shouldn't have come."

The pretty girl sighed. But he was implacable. She looked as innocent as a two-year-old child. "Why, Oscar," she began, "I'm sure I don't see how you can act so! And you are cross. You look as black as—"

"Wasn't that my dance you sat out with Graham?" the young man demanded.

The pretty girl nodded meekly. "Didn't you cut supper with me to go in with Reynolds?" he persisted. "I—I did have supper with him," admitted the pretty girl.

"Well," thundered the stern young man, "I am quite ready to have the matter explained. It seems to me that since I am engaged to you I have a few rights. You have treated me abominably and I can't stand everything! It isn't jealousy—it's just simple justice. I might have waited and let you write and explain, but I wanted to make it as easy for you as I could, so I came. And you've done things just as bad before, too."

The pretty girl looked still more grieved. "You are not a bit like yourself, Oscar," she said. "What I always admired most in you was your fairness and kindness. And it isn't kind to scold me. You know I can't bear to have any one angry with me. Do you know you are simply splendid when you scowl that way? Only you scare me."

The young man tried to look indifferent. "I don't want to frighten you, Laura," he said, magnanimously, "but you must know there are limits. And you haven't explained yet—"

"You can't imagine," went on the pretty girl, hunting for her handkerchief, "how it hurts me to have you think I would slight you. You know I never see any one else when you are around. When I see you come into a room I'm always proud to think you belong to me—me—And now to have you scold—"

"Now, now, little girl," said the stern young man, pulling away the handkerchief from her eyes. "I wouldn't be cross with you for worlds, and you know it."

"You've got me all upset!" sobbed the pretty girl.

"Maybe I am a little rough," said the young man, contritely. "I am impulsive. Forgive me, dearest. Don't look so woe-begone. Say you forgive me."

The pretty girl looked at him out of tear-wet eyes. "I forgive you, Oscar," she said, generously. "We—we won't talk about it any more. I'll just forget it. Of course you didn't realize what you were saying."

"You are the sweetest girl on earth," said the young man, fervently.

It was not until he was almost home some hours later that a thought struck the stern young man. He stopped short in his tracks.

"And she never explained in the least, or said she was sorry!" he cried in dawning amazement. "Now, how on earth did that happen?"

The Tottering Political Machines

Another Masterful, Lucid, Political Article

By JUDSON C. WELLIVER

To understand politics you must read dear political articles. A great moral movement is progressing through this country today and finding its expression in the reorganization of political parties. But the movement is so big, that only a lucid political thinker can make it clear to you. Mr. Welliver is—from all points of view—the best political writer in this country today.

His twenty years' experience provides him with the necessary knowledge to make clear in his November article the situation of the political machines in every state in the Union, and give a marvelously accurate picture of the national situation, BOTH REPUBLICAN AND DEMOCRATIC. Read it in
